

Now that we have entered a new year and are (thankfully) more than halfway through, I thought was time to explore new ideas and freshen up the layout of the Lisa Jo website. I hope you like it. Yes, change is necessary. I have been praying for God to lead me in all areas of my life, including how to move forward with this site. If it turns out to be a positive change, I give God the glory. If not so much, you can just blame me. But honestly, I feel this is a God thing, so with that, time for something new.

I will still write a blog from time to time, but I thought it might be kind of neat to do a little engaging. Not only is the Lisa Jo website able to receive comments, but I will be posting a Question of the Week on social media, hoping to get a little feedback. I will ask a thought-provoking question each week, and I encourage you to respond. If you don't want to respond in a public forum, just send an email to blog4lisajo@outlook.com. Please enter the question # in the subject line. I would truly love to hear from you.

Finally, I make no apologies for my faith, so often my questions will be faith-based. If anyone behaves or speaks in a derogatory or hateful manner toward me or any other who responds, I will remove your comments and will block you from posting in the future. I ask that you remain open-minded and respectful, to live and let live. Lastly, foul language of any kind will also be deleted. It is my hope that we can have a little fun and learn more about each other. Please, just be kind. As always, the main purpose for this website is and will always be to remind you that you are never alone, because God loves you dearly.

Let's just have some fun!

Blessings,

Lisa Jo

QUESTION #1

I really don't like January. Perhaps it's because it comes so quickly after the holiday highs, added to the shorter, darker days and the cold and barren weather outside. I'm just relieved when February 1st arrives. Do you have a day, month, or season that you really dislike? Or on a more positive note, what is your favorite?